To the Ladij
marchioness of Newcastle.

Madam;

I had the honour to Eeare so ~~many~~ good solutions given by Y^r. L^p. upon diuers questions moued, in a Whole afternoone Shee was pleased to ~~spend~~ bestow upon mij unworthie consideration, that I am turning to schoole w^th all speed, humbly ~~desiring~~ praying Y^r. L^p. mij mij ignorance, as to instruct me about the natural reason of thise wonderfull glasses, Which, as I vnderstand by Y^r. madam, will flij into powder if one breakes but the Least top of their tailes: ~~Marking of reason~~ Where, Without that one thij are hardlij to be broken by anij weight or strength. The King of fran is arguë unresolued in the question notwithstanding the Each Bee exercises to moue it to an assemblee of the Rt Philosophers of ~~Lis~~ Paris, ~~to~~ which the Microcosme of Lis Kingdome. Y^r. L^p. hath no cause to apprehend the ~~flow~~ teaching of these Little innocent gunners. If Shee did, madam, a seruant mij hold them close in his fist, and Y^r. L^p. selfe can break the Little end of their tails Without the least danger. But, as I was told to tell Y^r. L^p. I should bee loth to ~~know~~ believe anij female Shave Could rejne among'st so much outr-masculine Wisdom as we do admire in her. I pray God to bless Y^r. L^p. w^th a dayly increase of it, and ~~Lastly~~ Mr Huygens to graunt that amongst those admirers I may strive to driue by ~~—~~ meij of mij humble seruice the Honour to be accounted

Y^r. L^p.
