

ACAD.
VIGD. BAT.
BIBL.

Intor Epp. de Wilhem

186

Men heeft

Ich hebbe met Jacobus naender gesproken, als middelen van zekers gesoekt vader te nemen, op mij willende laden alt ongemaakt datter een vindering moest, met beeligen van een grote som, voordragend de zwaer personagis die't was desinend, viden men nits weygers moest, ind' wat aengact de doff dant medicament, dat daer in geen d'icuetent vire, wanner syn soez. dat beietden te nemen geeycht de syn. fseer syn is gebruykend, dan mijns perswagiden hebben nist conuflu d'icueten dat mij leet is, soo salmen moeten op anders middelen d'icueten, o' d'antwoort vlt polen afwaceten beynd.

en heeft

Ed. g'actien. Dinal
Amuse Timmerman

[Handwritten scribbles]

Hug. 37.

The first part of the document contains several lines of handwritten text in a cursive script. The text is written on aged, slightly yellowed paper. The handwriting is dense and somewhat difficult to decipher due to the cursive style and the fading of the ink. The lines are roughly horizontal, following the fold of the paper.

In the middle section, there are several lines of text that appear to be a signature or a specific heading. The handwriting is more prominent here, with larger loops and flourishes. The text is also written in the same cursive script as the first section.

Below the signature, there are several lines of text that are very faint and difficult to read. These lines appear to be a list or a series of notes, but the ink is too light to transcribe accurately. The text is still written in the same cursive style.