

S^r.

You will certainly with the more willingness excuse this impertinent freedom if I assure you it proceeds from a mind no less full fraught with wonder at the variety of those excellencies Heaven, or Nature have bestowed on you, than love, or esteem of those civilities wherewith I must acknowledge my self to be very much oblig'd. It might seeme a complement (if all the knowing world did not beare witness wth me) to tell you, that what all the Masters of Arts, & Sciences have propounded to us in precept, you have recollect'd in your self, & farther enforc'd on us by your Example. If I would prove the admirable influence of learning, & the incomparable benefits it brings to the mindes of men, w^{ch} many of our grante naturall wits doe seeme to contest against, slighting all other improvements but what they derive from the stock of their owne common-sens; if I would declare what reason hath borrow'd from nature, what like a good huswife shew hath spinn'd out of her owne bowells in the matter of Laws, & Policy; if I would tell the world the secret Plots w^{ch} the Stars conspire together, what language it is that nature speaks voluntarily, & what when forc'd, & constrain'd by fire: how the ways of true honor are to be tract; what it is that maintains the quick returns of courtesy, & Wit; what the mysteries of pleasure are, the sweet strains, & lulling reliques of it; the delightful propositions of an active playfully & warme braine; what the true meaning of mirth, merriment or poetry is, or how to use them without extravagance, ~~and~~ by ^{an} antidote of vertue against moderate passions; I would hold forth your person, & conversation where they would find a compendious demonstration of what many voluminous Authors would never be able to propose as practi-^{all}, though perhaps they might ~~be~~ ^{useful} in order to speculation, upon their faiths: All these ^{shall} stand open either in your practice or you have the key to let them out by your reasoning & discourse: And since I have taken upon me the privilege thus freely to let you understand my apprehension of these truths, it will be superfluous to add any farther expression of my just value, & esteem: And therefore I only engage you to believe that I believe what I profess, & by this means you will best know how much I must needs be

S^r.

Your most humble, & faithfull servant

Vtrecht
May 14.

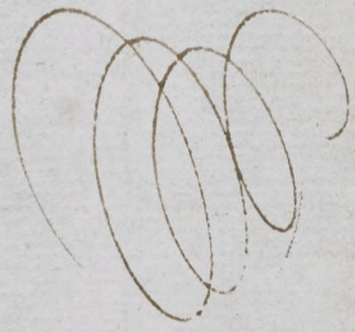

John Cole.

Aen myn Heer

Myn Heer van Eylocom

in den Afgehe.