the dutch risk turning indonesia into "another jordan" if 1A they continue to put off the final initialling of an agreement with the indonesian delegation waiting for them here, a well informed indonesian source said today, the full delegation, headed by foreign minister anak agung gde agung, met today with indonesian ambassador utojo who returned from the hague last night after a fruitless week waiting for a reply to the aids memoire he delivered on monday. the aide memoire proposed a final meeting of the two delegations here last week, but instead of replying directly the netherlands government sent what indonesians here termed an 'insulting' diplomatic note to the government at djakarta''.

sources close to the delegation said its members were getting increasingly worried over the possible effect of the "stiffnecked" dutch attitude on their people at home and in asia in general.

to the people of asia, the dutch represent the west in this particular situation, one source said today. the west has already made mistakes in asia, and if this becomes another mistake, it will place right into the hands of the communists. he said rising resentment in indonesia might eventually force the present moderate government out and put extremists in chorus who might "take unilateral action" against dutch interests in indonesia if the two countries relations were not settled by a prompt agreement
